

I am disappointed to see Sinclair Broadcasting airing an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. As I look at actions such as these I become concerned with big media. I wish media was more local and focused on the community. Instead I see too many big companies only concerned about the bottom line. Public airwaves are free and Sinclair is using these free airwaves for a political attack. This suggests media ownership rules need to be strengthened.

Thank you,

Matthew Yarkosky